SCHOOL STRIKERS GO BACK TO DESKS

Gloucester Mayor Overrules
Principal and Classes
Start Again
TEACHER ASKS FAIR TRIAL

The striking students of the Gloucester City High School went back to classes this morning. They marched into school in a line headed by Mayor Anderson, of Gloucester, and Dr. J. A. Beek, a school director.

The boys and girls appeared at the rear door of the school at 8 o'clock. When the last bell rang they entered and were greeted with a series of questions by Superintendent Burns and School Director Maier.

"Is the strike off?" asked Mr. Burns.

"I don't know," replied John Black, spokesman for the pupils.

"Then get out until it is over," snapped the superintendent.

With this order the strikers drifted back into the schoolyard, where they were met by Trust Officer John Coporan, who asked that they fall in line behind him. He led the way to the main entrance and the procession halted on the steps.

Seeing this ceremony, Mayor Anderson and Dr. Beek, who had been on watch, hurried up.

Mayor Takes a Hand

The Mayor rushed up the steps and into the school, demanding of Superintendent Burns that the strikers be admitted. While the Mayor and the superintendent argued as to who was in authority at the school, Dr. Beek shouted:

"Come on, boys and girls, we're going in," and in they went.

Once they were settled back at their desks the matter was left for Mayor Anderson and Superintendent Burns to decide.

The superintendent insisted that the strikers could not return to school until they had promised that the strike was over and that they had been out on strike, but had just been "parading around." He declared he was in authority in the school and had a right to act as he pleased in the matter.

To this the Mayor replied that he was the city's chief executive and had appealed to the students to return to school today at a public meeting last night and it was up to him to see to it that they were allowed to return.

The Mayor won out.

Then Mayor Anderson was called to the office of Superintendent Burns where Mrs. Frank Sagers told him that she was considering bringing charges against the superintendent because he had pushed her daughter, Mary, out of the door yesterday when she wanted to return to school but refused to forswear allegiance to the strikers.

More Trouble for Burns

The Mayor advised her to allow her daughter to return to avoid further trouble. She consented.

A plea for a trial before fair judges was made by William Katcher last night at a meeting of Gloucester City citizens, to whom he explained the situation that led to his suspension by Burns.

He will receive a hearing tomorrow before a committee of the School Board, consisting of H. Meyer Black, Harold Conner and Charles Meyers.

"The most serious charge against me," said Katcher, "is that I was familiar with some of the pupils. By the Almighty God I swear to all you men and women present that I am not guilty of any such charge. Never in my career have I met one pupil of the Gloucester school outside of the classrooms.

"I ask you parents, you friends of the pupils to see that I have a fair trial, and not let such an imputation rest upon my name as has followed my dismissal. I ask a clean judgment."

OLDEST PHILADELPHIA FIRM MADE BEER HERE IN 1687

Francis Perot's Sons Malting Company Was Founded Long Before Milwaukee Was Thought Of

This is the first of a series of sketches of Philadelphia firms in existence more than 100 years and still remaining in direct control of descendants of the founders.

To the Francis Perot's Sons Malting Company belongs the title of the oldest business house in Philadelphia. In 1687, five years after the arrival of William Penn on the banks of the Delaware, Anthony Morris, 2d, an orphan, who came to this country in 1682, purchased the lot on Front street below Walnut, the site of the original malt-house and brewery.

In the firm's offices today, in the Lafayette Building, hangs a painting by Peter Cooper, dated 1720, depicting the quaint waterfront and square riggers in the harbor, with the brewery of Anthony Morris' nesting among the buildings on Front street, then on the very edge of the river.

Famous Before Milwaukee

According to contemporaneous documents, the product, long before Milwaukee became famous or was even on the map, was noted "for its pure and wholesome character and for its popularity among the hardy and God-fearing pioneers of the Keystone State."

The old building has disappeared; the building since erected contains a memorial stone. From 1678 until 1707 the Baptist denomination worshipped in the original building. Nor was home-brewing frowned upon in those days, for Watson says that "it was very common for good livers to have malt houses on their premises for making home-made strong beer."

Anthony Morris, 2d, founder of the firm, was second Mayor of Philadelphia, and about 1705 became Supreme Judge of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Members of other generations who followed him also occupied from time to time positions of rank in the life of the community. Anthony Morris, 5th, served as major in the Revolution and was killed at the Battle of Princeton. Captain Samuel Morris was commander of the First City Troop, which served as Washington's bodyguard throughout the war.

Married Into Firm

The name Perot became associated with the firm when Francis Perot, formerly an apprentice in the firm, married the daughter of Thomas Morris, six employes of the firm. He later succeeded to the business after the sixth generation of Morris.

In 1882 the firm purchased a malt-house on the Erie Canal near Oswego. In 1887 incorporation under the name of Francis Perot's Sons Malting Company took place. In the eighth generation, the one that now has succeeded to the business, Francis Perot was followed by T. Morris Perot, Jr. and Elliston Perot. The firm was incorporated in 1887. A large new plant was erected in Buffalo in 1907. The headquarters of the concern remain in this city, and Mr. Elliston Perot, now vice president, looks forward to a movement by Congress to reinstate beer and light wine.

PHILA. WOMEN WILL HEAR LADY ASTOR

Local Delegation to Take Part in 'Convention of Voters'
League

ARE GOING TO BALTIMORE

Twenty-two delegates and thirty-one alternates will represent Eastern Pennsylvania at the annual convention of the National League of Women Voters to be held in Baltimore from the 24th to the 26th of this month.

An equal number of delegates, as well as fifteen alternates from the section west of Harrisburg, also will be present.

Whether the League should openly endorse political candidates and whether it should permit its officers to occupy positions on county and State committees are two important questions that will come up.

Owing to the fact that the purpose of the league is essentially to educate its members in matters of legislation, and not to get behind any one candidate, it is believed here that the Pennsylvania delegation will be decidedly against the open endorsement of candidates. Several local members have said that they are not in favor of officers of the league becoming members of State or county committees.

Special interest is being shown in the address to be delivered the night of April 26 by Lady Nancy Astor, who expects to sail from England next Wednesday.

Preceding the League convention there will be a Pan-American conference for women, which will be held from the 20th until the 23. Women from all parts of the world will attend these sessions on child welfare, education, women in industry, prevention of traffic in women, civil and political status of women and other subjects.

The list of delegates from the eastern end of the State is as follows: Miss Marion Reilly, Mrs. Charles J.

Rhoads, Miss Lucy Lewis, Miss Lydia Stokes Adams, Miss Maud Burt McCall and Mrs. Barclay H. Warburton, all of Philadelphia; Mrs. Lyman D. Gilbert, Harrisburg; Miss Mary Erskine, Chambersburg; Mrs. R. P. Sherwood, York; Miss Martha G. Thomas, Whitford; Mrs. Lewis L. Smith, Strasford; Mrs. Herman L. Schwartz, Wynnewood; Mrs. Thomas Ross and Mrs. Irwin James, Doylestown; Mrs. Paul Tappan, Ardmore; Mrs. B. B. Bergey, Reading; Miss Catherine A. Hoffman, Lebanon; Mrs. J. Wood Musina, Pottsville; Mrs. O. S. Kriebel, Pottsville; Mrs. Edward Y. Harshorne, Haverford; Mrs. Horace A. Pyle, West Chester; Mrs. Robert C. Brooks, Swarthmore.

The alternates are Mrs. George A. Dunning, Mrs. Albert E. Burns, Mrs. E. Bowman Leaf, Mrs. J. Norris Dilworth, Mrs. Charles B. Cavitt, Mrs. Oscar S. McCall, Mrs. Morris Lee, Mrs. F. J. Geering and Mrs. Harriet L. Hubbs, all of Philadelphia; Miss Anna Livingston, Exton; Mrs. William A. Jaquette, Mrs. J. Russell Smith and Mrs. Warren Marshall, of Swarthmore; Mrs. William C. Perkins, Langhorne; Mrs. Jeannette Keim and Mrs. Margaret Wilcox, Cynwyd; Mrs. C. G. Hoag, Haverford; Mrs. F. D. Maxwell, Lansdowne; Miss Hazel Thatcher and Miss

Lucy Miller, Bangor; Miss Mary W. Lippincott, Wyncoote; Mrs. Bernard Olsenski, Doylestown; Mrs. Edward Twaddell, Devon; Mrs. I. Roberts Comford, West Chester; Mrs. Mary Acher, Downingtown; Mrs. Charles C. Higley, West Chester; Mrs. Franklin T. Chaney, Bustleton; Mrs. William Smith, Paoli; Mrs. Harry E. Kohn, Merion, and Mrs. Charles E. Martin, Wayne.

GASOLINE

THE VOLATILE GAS

(Volatility is the readiness with which gasoline gives up its power)

MILEAGE GOES UP

UPKEEP GOES DOWN

When you use the highly volatile Texaco gas it's just like putting a new motor in your car.

Every motor has a theoretical horse-power rating. Whether it actually gives that power or not depends on the gasoline and how readily it vaporizes.

You may have a four-cylinder forty h. p. engine today and a six-cylinder forty-five h. p. motor tomorrow—in effect. That difference is in the gasoline you buy. When you buy Texaco, the volatile gas, you are buying full engine-power.

It's what happens in the cylinder at the moment of maximum compression—the vital sparking instant—that determines how much of your engine's capacity to deliver is actually delivered to the rear wheels.

Some gas is sluggish; it does not vaporize quickly; it is not completely volatile. Such gasoline cannot possibly give up all its power. It hasn't time.

Texaco Gasoline gives the immediate action that puts full vigor into your motor. Texaco Gasoline is volatile.

You'll find that there's more mileage in Texaco Gasoline—and you'll find, too, that your upkeep is lower. With a good spark—at the right time—and Texaco, the volatile gas, you have the combination that means easier starting, better hill-work, greater flexibility, smoother idling and less shifting—better performance in everything a car should do.

Texaco Motor Oils are heavy-body lubricants and are distinguished by their clear, pale color. Light, medium, heavy and extra-heavy—they fit all cars and all conditions. You will find them wherever you see the Texaco red star.
